HOUSE BROKEN INTO; AUTOMOBILE STOLEN

By Carlotta Anderson

A Glen Echo house was burglarized and the family car stolen in the early morning hours of August 19. The Sharma family of 6108 Princeton Avenue was in the house at the time.

The burglar stood on an outside chair to enter the house through a dining room window which may have been slightly ajar, according to Sheela Sharma. He took a wallet which was lying on the dining room table as well as a ring of keys, she said. The wallet contained only a few dollars, a social security card, driver's license but no credit cards.

Mrs. Sharma theorized that the break-in occurred some time in the middle of the night and that the burglar returned around 6:00 a.m. for the car, a dark red 1984 Mitsubishi station wagon. She said the next door neighbor saw the car by the house at 5:30 a.m. but it was gone when her husband, Krishan Dass, went out to drive it to work at 6:30 a.m.

"My husband was taking a shower at 6:00 a.m. and I don't think the burglar would have come in then."

The burglar was equipped with a number of items to facilitate a break-in. He left behind two very dark, sooty bricks, "like they came from a chimney," Mrs. Sharma said. He brought some newspapers, presumably to pick up the dirty bricks with. Also left was a razor, although he was able to enter without cutting a screen.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor,

How lovely of Eleanor Balaban to adorn our town with the many, many flags July 4th. A lovely gesture--thanks for letting us know.

Nancy McDonald

REMINDER

Now that the town maintenance contractor has cut back shrubbery which was hanging over streets, blocking signs and growing over sidewalks, residents are reminded that it is their responsibility to prevent a recurrence of the problem.

All public areas are to be kept clear of weeds, plants or debris coming from yards and it is a municipal infraction if the resident neglects to do this.

The mayor also wants to remind all residents that any weed over 18 inches in height is in violation of both town and county laws.

CONTRACTOR DOES BIG CLEAN-UP

All plants hanging over town roadways, blocking signs or growing over sidewalks were cut back last month by the new town maintenance contractor, Mark Peyton.

His firm also did a major clean-out of the old trolley right-of-way, making it possible to stroll along most of it as through an arbor. The town will pay the firm for this work and send the bill to O. Roy Chalk, who owns the property, according to the mayor. If Chalk doesn't pay, it will be added to his taxes, the mayor said.

In addition to specific jobs like these, Peyton will routinely clean out storm drains and inspect problem areas, for which the firm will be paid $100 per month.

HOUSE BROKEN INTO: (from p.1)

Officer George Ludington of the Montgomery County Police said the crime was a typical break-in, where the burglar takes "whatever presents itself, whatever is available." There has been no rash of car thefts in this area, he said.

The automobile was discovered by D.C. police in the 1600 block of Euclid St., NW on Aug. 26 and returned to the Sharmas. Charged with unauthorized use of a vehicle were Maurice Wayne Turner, 42, who had several outstanding warrants for his arrest, and Raymond P. Williams, 27.

No drugs or other stolen property were found in the car or on the suspects, according to Officer C. T. Randolph, D.C. police spokesman.

As for Mrs. Sharma, it has turned a town where she felt she could leave her door open into a place that is "scary."

A TOWN CUSTOM

Newer residents may not be aware that when a town resident dies, it has long been a tradition for fellow Glen Echoans to send flowers for the funeral or make a charitable donation in the deceased's memory. For many years, Tillie McNoldy has collected the monies for this purpose.

Any resident who wishes to be notified when such a collection is being made should tell Tillie. Her phone number is 229-4119. She would also appreciate being notified of the death of a town resident or former town resident.

When flowers are sent or a contribution made, a card listing the names of the contributors is sent to the relatives. Often, when flowers are sent to the funeral, any remaining monies are given to the family or donated to a fund of their choice.

SIX MONTHS SAILING TO SAVE MARINE LIFE

By Michael Frankel

[From February to August town resident Michael Frankel sailed 5,000 miles and visited 22 islands in the Caribbean Basin on his 32 ft. Chinese junk-rigged sailboat Sabra. As chairman of the board of directors of the Center for Environmental Education, Michael's purpose was to study first-hand the problems of the marine environment in that area and to discuss marine conservation issues with local officials.

At times sailing alone, sometimes joined by Center staff members, his wife, Merna, and son, Scott, Michael journeyed from Washington, D.C. to the Dominican Republic, then Puerto Rico and as far south as the island of Guadeloupe. On his return voyage he was given permission to enter Cuba (necessary from both U.S. and Cuban authorities) and met in Havana with officials from the Cuban Ministry of Fisheries.

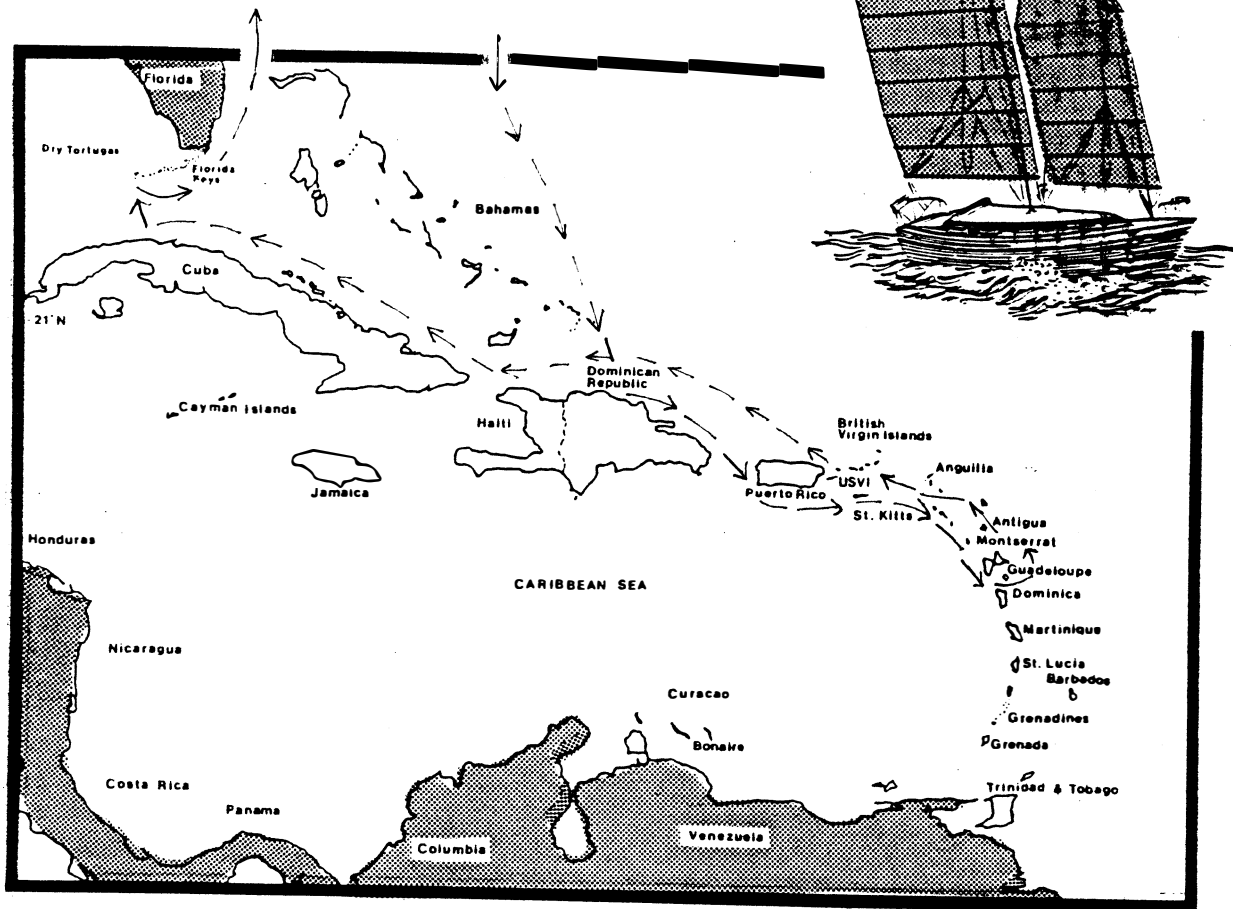

Michael has lived at 12 Wellesley Circle since 1978. In addition to his work with the Center, Michael publishes a quarterly magazine, "Living Aboard," aimed at people who live on boats.]

For the most part, the marine environment in the Caribbean Basin is as beautiful as the images on picture postcards and travel brochures of the region. But these views are literally the surface beauty. Beneath these first impressions are the realities of continued extermination of endangered species, destruction of critical marine habitat, and pollution of the water. Our fact-finding journey was an opportunity to look behind the picturesque scenery and study the marine ecosystems and how they relate to the conservation programs of the Center for Environmental Education.

Six of the world's seven species of sea turtles inhabit the waters of the Caribbean and the southeastern U.S. coastline. They are threatened throughout this region. The 6,000 to 8,000 endangered humpback whales of the North Atlantic, who summer off the coast of New England, winter and breed in a newly designated marine sanctuary off the coast of the Dominican Republic. (The remaining 2,000 or so humpback whales in the world are equally endangered in the Pacific.)

Millions of American tourists vacation in the Caribbean islands, creating intense environmental pressure on the sensitive marine ecosystems by buying endangered species products such as tortoise shell jewelry, by anchoring and thus damaging threatened coral reefs, and by discarding plastic debris off cruise ships. Considerable American investments are used for tourist development in the islands, which results in more hotel and beach construction and elimination of shoreline habitat for threatened species.

One of the highlights of the trip was the opportunity to sail into Havana, Cuba and meet with Cuban officials from the Ministry of Fisheries. As a representative of the Center, I was very well received by the Cubans. After several days of meetings the Cubans agreed, for the first time, to send an observer to the recently held Convention of International Trade in Endangered Species of Fauna and

THE SABRA PROJECT

Flora, CITES, in Ottawa. Cuba is by far the largest island in the Caribbean and a substantial source of international trade in sea turtle products. Their continued participation in CITES would be a very important step towards controlling this trade.

Besides the busy environmental agenda, I also had a marvelous sailing experience, complete with the beauties, frustrations, and dangers of being in a big ocean with a small sailboat. One of the more amusing and sometimes frustrating experiences was over the simple act of showering.

There were several types of shower experiences on this trip which I decided to number as I described them to the readers of Sabra's log: 1) the one-handed cold sponge bath with the other hand holding onto the boat for dear life; 2) the jump in the ocean with a shampoo bottle (hard soap doesn't lather in salt water) following by a very quick on-board fresh water rinse; 3) an extravagant on-board hot or cold shower using our precious fresh water supplies; 4) a dockside hosing down using someone else's fresh water supply; 5) an honest hot water shower in a marina; and 6) a shower with your clothes on so that you can wash them at the same time (this came to me after reading Anne Tyler's Accidental Tourist.)

I and Sabra returned with a wealth of information and a busy agenda for further Center initiatives in the wider Caribbean. Hopefully, there are more adventures out there for me.

COUNCIL QUESTIONS SOME EXPENSES

By Anne Lewis

Most of the August Town Council meeting was concerned with explanations of items on the treasurer's report.

An expense of $237.50 for leaf bags was explained by the mayor as being a half-year's supply. The bags, kept at the mayor's residence for use by town residents, are explicitly for leaves and garden trash.

Councilman Renny Springuel questioned why the town had agreed to pay for half of the removal of a dead elm tree at 36 Wellesley Circle when the council's resolution had specified that the opinion of the Open Space Committee was to be considered before final approval.

The mayor said he checked with the two members who have been appointed to what is intended as a five-member committee. He said he is having trouble finding people willing to serve on the committee. (Debbie Beers has since been appointed).

Resident Bea Smith wondered about the responsibility of the town for the tree, even though it was partially on town right-of-way, because she considered that the landscaping there contributed to the death of the tree. Mayor Kuster responded that the tree had Dutch elm disease and constituted "a dangerous condition."

The council also discussed the payment to Charles Yester of $675 for two month's work for town upkeep, a minimum of 15 hours a week at $5 an hour. Mayor Kuster said Yester is supposed to clean each street every month and he will provide Mr. Yester with a list of duties from now on.

RESIDENT WANTS REMOVAL OF NO PARKING SIGN

Resident Willem Polak asked the Town Council last month to remove a "no parking" sign from in front of his property at 6001 Princeton Avenue. He would like parking to be allowed from his driveway to the end of the street, which is a deadend.

There are now three signs along the 110-foot stretch. The one in front of the Polak property was recently added by the town to ensure that the police would take action when called. The police refused to recognize the distinctive signs previously used by the town although both the town attorney and the county attorney maintained they were legal, according to Mayor Kuster.

"We could file an injunction in court and force the county to obey our laws," the mayor told The Echo, "but at $20 per sign it's more cost-effective just to replace them."

All signs will be replaced by next spring, he said, with first priority to "trouble areas," which also include Oberlin Avenue. The council tabled the Polak request until the September meeting because the property of the resident across the street is also involved. At that time, the mayor will present a recommendation.

*Circus a Pleasure,
No Problems*

Many residents attended the Big Apple Circus last month and none complained that it was a problem to them, Mayor Kuster said.

There was only one parking incident, although parking near the Glen Echo Park parking lot was sometimes a bit tight, he said. "They got their dumpster out in two days and there was no odor problem," he said.

COUNCIL CONSIDERS ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF HISTORIC DESIGNATION

By Anne Lewis

Mayor Fred Kuster and interested council members will meet with the Historic Preservation Board and the Maryland Park and Planning Board in mid-September for a preliminary discussion about designating the town of Glen Echo a historic district.

Council member Nancy Long said there would be some tax advantages, but probably no restrictions on home improvements, since the town would probably not qualify for the highest level of preservation designation.

According to town Clerk/Treasurer Peter Godfrey, the preservation listing allows residents to receive tax breaks when they do restoration work.

Other council members wanted to be sure that there would be no increase in taxes and Councilwoman Long suggested that the matter should have a public hearing.

TOWN SEEKS GRANT TO BUY
OLD TROLLEY RIGHT-OF-WAY

Ten thousand dollars might be available to the town through Project Open Space, according to Mayor Kuster, which he proposed be used to negotiate with O. Roy Chalk over obtaining the old trolley car right-of-way.

The item will go before the Maryland Park and Planning Board in September.

The mayor told the council at its August meeting that if the town could obtain the Chalk property he would like to arrange to swap it for park service land at the Oberlin/Bowdoin/Tulane Avenue location.

Councilman Bill Shultz noted that the town's interest in obtaining the land has a long history. The mayor said he had been working on it for the six years he has been in office, but the total time involved has been more like ten years.

BLOODMOBILE COMES TO GLEN ECHO OCTOBER 1

By Carlotta Anderson

[The next Bloodmobile at the Clara Barton House will take place on Thursday, October 1, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Reservations may be made by calling 492-6245 but drop-in donors are also welcome.]

Giving blood in Glen Echo is an experience unlike that at any other Bloodmobile in the country. Although the procedures and equipment represent the last word in technology, the site is redolent of the Victorian age, with furnishings and carpeting evocative of the years when Clara Barton ran the American Red Cross from this location.

It is especially stirring to donate blood in this setting, since the Bloodmobiles are organized by the institution Clara Barton founded.

Anyone over the age of 16, who weighs more than 110 pounds and is in generally good health can be a donor. For every unit of blood donated, potentially one life is saved. It may be the life of someone undergoing open heart surgery, a child who has been hit by a car, or a young mother who has just had a difficult childbirth.

It's much easier to give blood than you might think. The whole procedure takes about an hour and most people (almost four million each year) feel completely normal afterwards.

The first step is to fill out a form that asks if you have been in Haiti or Africa in the past three years, been in contact with anyone on kidney dialysis, ever had hepatitis, taken anti-malarial medications or been a sex partner of someone who might be at high risk for AIDS. These are all factors which might rule you out as a blood donor.

The nurse will then take your temperature, pulse, blood pressure and red corpuscle count. Some people are rejected as donors because, while they are not anemic, their red blood count is not sufficiently above normal to allow for the loss of a pint of blood without their becoming anemic. There are also several more steps taken to make sure your blood could not contain the AIDS virus.

After being accepted as a donor you will lie on a table where a nurse inserts a new, sterile needle into your arm and your blood drips into a bag on a scale. When the one pint weight is reached--in about six to eight minutes--the needle is withdrawn and you hold your arm upright for three minutes. This is actually the only uncomfortable aspect of the entire procedure.

The next step is the refreshment table, where you must eat some cookies, crackers or candy and several cups of lemonade or water. Even if you are anxious to get home, you have to sit there 10 minutes so the volunteers can be sure you are feeling fine before you leave. Most people can go back to work immediately.

The goal of the National Park Service and the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross--who co-sponsor the Clara Barton site Bloodmobile--is 35 units. With the cooperation of the residents of Glen Echo, perhaps this goal could be achieved on October 1.

TOWN COUNCIL HIGHLIGHTS

August 10

Another newcomer in Glen Echo! Not a baby, but a senior citizen. Minnie Adam, sister of Carolyn Reptsik at 7309 University Avenue, has moved here from Philadelphia, Pa. and will be residing at that address.

There are also two new tenants in the apartment. Gene Tafel, who works at Glen Echo Hardware and is a car salesman, and Jim Erb, who is a car salesman for Ourisman Chevrolet.

A hearty welcome to each of you!

* * * * *

Alberta Bartkus, Carolyn Reptsik, Minnie Adam, Paul Alban and Mac and I visited Pat and Tony Tannouse at their new restaurant in Deale, Maryland and found it a delightful and relaxing place to dine.

The food was delicious, the service excellent and it was a place we would suggest you try to visit sometime. Boat enthusiasts especially will enjoy the fleet of boats docked within view of the dining room.

Pat and Tony, who operated La Haute Cuisine in town for many years, send their regards to all their former neighbors and friends and invite them to pay a visit. Directions: From Beltway 495, go east on Pennsylvania Avenue (Md route 4). Exit right onto Route 258 toward Deale. Proceed to Route 2 and turn right. Go 1 mile to Route 256 and turn left. Proceed to Pierpoint Restaurant, approximately a mile on your right.

Our sincere sympathy to the family of Laura Walker, who died August 8th. The family lived for several years at 6102 Bryn Mawr Avenue. Surviving children are Charles, Thomas and Patricia McDougall. She also left five grandchildren.

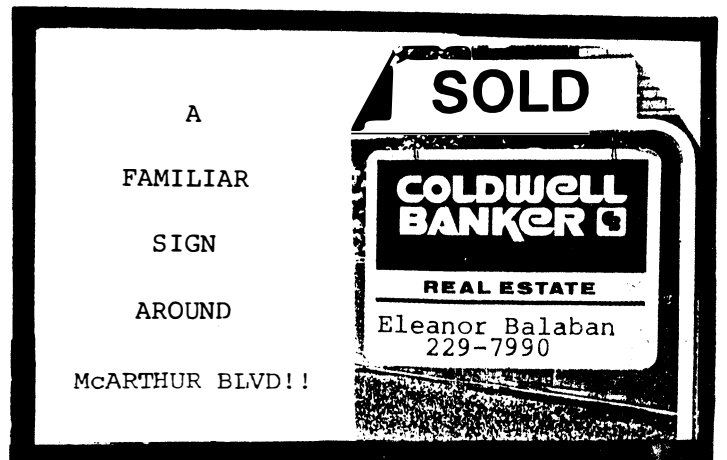

Painting and repairs on 80 percent of the windows at the Town Hall were necessary because of moisture accumulation on lower frames, Councilman Odell told the council. Shutters will be re-installed, painted black, and, if possible, bat-proofed. The total work will cost approximately $1900...

Councilman Shultz asked if the county or state had a program to investigate the radon gas problem and the mayor said he would look into the matter...

Councilman Shultz will do a study and evaluation of all the sidewalks in town. He said there is still work to do by Craig Paving on the sidewalks...

James Lee will replace Creg Howland as site manager of Glen Echo Park, Councilwoman Long reported. Mr. Lee is coming here from assignment at Yosemite Park in California...
