LIVELY INTEREST IN BUYING RIGHT-OF-WAY SECTIONS

By Carlotta Anderson

The town has authorized its attorney, Tom Craven, to look into the possibility of its acquiring all or part of the former trolley right-of-way alongside Glen Echo, according to Mayor Debbie Beers. The property was foreclosed at auction last month because its owner, D.C. Transit System, defaulted on a note scheduled to be paid to a group of transit riders who won a class action suit against it.

In addition, at least four Glen Echo property owners have expressed interest in buying sections of the property which abut their lots, according to Leonard N. Bebchick, trustee for the riders group. They cited a desire to extend their yards, pave over for car parking, construct a garage or other structure, or create a better barrier against MacArthur Blvd. traffic.

Half a dozen environmental groups have approached Mr. Bebchick with an eye to making a hiker-biker trail, but "we are looking for more money" than they could offer, he said.

Mr. Bebchick said he wanted to solicit the widest number of proposals from interested people because he was looking for the maximum possible return for his clients. He asked that any prospective buyer contact him at 6321 Lenox Rd., Bethesda, MD 20817, and said he will contact every person who writes him.

If he gets enough expression of interest for the Glen Echo portions of the land he will move quickly to have a survey done of the desired sections, he said, and get an appraiser to set a fair price, which must be approved by the U.S. Court of Appeal. However, the earliest the property could be sold to a new owner would be in fall, he said. He hopes the sale will be completed by the beginning of spring, 1994, at the latest.

He said the Glen Echo section is severable from the rest of the right-of-way, which extends to the Dalecarlia Reservoir in

UTILITY STRUCTURE PLANS "BACK TO DRAWING BOARD"

By David Sproul and Carlotta Anderson

The National Park Service has gone "back to the drawing board" in its plan to build a utilities structure on park land located between Oberlin and Tulane Aves., Glen Echo Park site manager Frank Cucurullo told the town council last month.

The two distinct roles for the facility—housing both mobile maintenance equipment and fixed utilities structures—may still be combined in one building or they may be separated, he said. He promised to promptly forward to the council any decisions made, especially concerning its location.

Mayor Beers restated the town's position that no new construction should be allowed to interfere with any existing residential area and that all possible sites should be considered.

Only one-third of the funds requested for upgrading the park's utility system have been appropriated by Congress. They represent only the planning phase of the work, according to Sandy Zimmet, an aide to Cong. Connie Morella. Ms. Zimmet said that Cong. Morella wants to make sure that the plan has the approval of local citizens before she works to obtain the remaining funds.

Two people with businesses in town have written Cong. Morella opposing the proposed location of the structure between Tulane and Oberlin. Several petitions in opposition have been received at the town hall in response to a mailing by resident Eleanor Balaban. They are being forwarded to Cong. Morella's office at her request.

TWO LONG-TERM RESIDENTS AND AN ANCIENT TREE DIE

By Carlotta Anderson

July was a month to mourn the passing of two old-time Glen Echoans who figured prominently in its history as well as a mammoth oak which probably sprouted as long ago as the mid-1800s.

Ronald H. (Ronnie) Vine, who died Saturday, July 10, arrived in Glen Echo in 1919, a nine-year-old from Southampton, England, whose mother had married a "Yank" after Ronnie's father died in a shipping accident. The family lived at 9 Vassar Circle until 1930, when they bought the house at 6010 Princeton Ave. Soon afterwards, Ronnie married and had a child, Ronald F. (Fred), who was born in 1931. Ronnie acquired tuberculosis and was in and out of sanatoriums for several years, then worked for the Navy Dept. during World War II. In the late 50s, he moved back to Glen Echo to live with his mother and Fred, who had been living with his grandmother after Ronnie's divorced wife, Margaret, died. Ronnie was working as a salesman for McGregor Printing in D.C. when he retired in 1975.

A few years later, Ronnie began writing an imaginative series of reminiscences of Glen Echo in the 20s for The Echo. Titled "The Irresistible Mr. Weems," it recounted his conversations with Mr. Weems, a ghost. Ronnie and Mr. Weems talked about old-time Glen Echo in fourteen installments between 1978-79. In "Walking the Towpath...with Ronnie Vine," Ronnie mused on the canal and its history in six articles from 1983-84. From March, 1980-May, 1981, he was a town councilmember. He moved to Fairfax, Va. with his son in 1984.

Ethel D. Hartman, who died on July 10 at the age of 97, was a resident of the Clara Barton House from 1968 until 1988, when she moved to the Methodist Home of Washington. When she first lived in the Red Cross founder's house, 56 years after Ms. Barton's death, it was divided into seven or more apartments.

In 1963, Mrs. Hartman helped organize the Friends of Clara Barton, Inc. and served as its secretary and volunteers administrator until 1979. Her fund-raising activities helped raise more than $100,000 for the acquisition and restoration of the house. It was the Friends of Clara Barton who salvaged the site and presented it to the U.S. Park Service.

A graduate of Vassar College, Mrs. Hartman arrived in the area in the late 1920s. Her husband, George B. Hartman, died in 1968. She had no immediate survivors.

While living in the Clara Barton house, Mrs. Hartman served as its caretaker. Before the park service took over the property in 1975, she served as primary tour guide, assisted by the late Ruth Bonzer and Ms. Bonzer's nephew, Dean Guernsey.

A lordly oak tree, more than 100 feet high, ended its reign of a century-and-a-half in mid-July when it was felled for safety's sake by the Sommers' Tree Service. The tree, which towered over the stone house at 42 Wellesley Circle, had many dead branches and was clearly dying.

Pruned last year in an effort to save it, the oak had begun leaning toward the house and the trunk was less than an inch from the gutters, endangering the structure. It was impossible to count the rings after it was cut down because much of the tree center was mushy and had been eaten by insects.

However, Rick Sommers, owner of the tree firm, estimated that it was probably contemporaneous with the construction of the house because the trunk grew nearly against the walls, an inappropriate spot to plant an oak.

The house, where Councilman Bill Shultz and his family reside, was built in 1853 and served as the cookhouse/slave quarters for the next door plantation house, now the home of Councilman Michael Brintnall and his family.

D.C. He viewed the logical purchaser for the rest of the line as the National Park Service, which might want to widen access lanes of the Clara Barton Parkway or the parkway itself.

Questioned as to whether the property has a clear title, he replied that all sales would be in the form of a quit claim, or the transfer only of whatever rights exist. He said he has been advised that the deeds of the properties alongside Glen Echo all appear to have fee simple title, meaning outright ownership as opposed to an easement for the use of a trolley line. "No one has made claim of adverse possession under Maryland law," he said. Parking a car on the property would not qualify, he said.

He recommended that the town consider whether it was more advantageous for it to have the land for environmental purposes and lose the tax revenue, or to have it privately purchased and possibly increase the town tax base.

ROCKS THROWN FROM TOWN ONTO PARKWAY

By Carlotta Anderson

Rocks were thrown onto the Clara Barton Parkway from a spot near the lower end of Cornell Ave. around 6:00 p.m. on Tuesday, July 13. The incident was reported to the U.S. Park Police by a motorist.

Park police officers checked the woods above the spot and found an area being used by young children as a meeting place. They went to the home of some children, who denied they were involved in the rock-throwing.

Some old furniture and other items that had been set up for a kind of clubhouse were removed by National Park Service personnel. Several windows had been broken in the rear of an empty house at 32 Wellesley Circle, which is now for sale, and the back door was open, according to Lt. David Stover of the U.S. Park Police, Glen Echo substation. This information was turned over to county police.

Lt. Stover said that neighbors have been asked to keep their eyes open and to report any children hanging around that area.

STREET PAVING STRATEGY CONSIDERED

Mayor Beers would like to have the town's streets surveyed with an eye to removing the existing top layers and having a new overall layer applied, she told the council last month. She thought this was preferable to the continuing piecemeal repairs that have been performed for many years.

The town could save considerably by arranging to be included in the county's paving schedule, Clerk Treasurer Kate Horwitz suggested.

In the absence of a quorum, the council was unable to make any decisions regarding street repairs at its July meeting. Councilmembers Brintnall and Shultz were absent.

--David Sproul

SIDEWALK, STREET REPAIRS NEEDED?

Mayor Debbie Beers welcomes input from Glen Echo residents regarding street and sidewalk damage or deterioration that they think requires immediate attention.

Although the town is commissioning a professional survey of needed repairs, the mayor wants to prioritize the repairs based on citizen complaints.

If you wish to report what you believe is a serious problem, please call the mayor at 229-7308 or Clerk Treasurer Kate Horwitz at 320-2171.

HOW TO RECYCLE APPLIANCES CONTAINING REFRIGERANTS

The Federal Clean Air Act prohibits the venting or release of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) and hydrochlorofluorocarbons (HCFCs) in refrigerant gases when appliances are disposed of or recycled. Here's how you can properly handle this problem:

- If the appliance is still working, consider donating it. Call the Recycling Hotline (590-0046), M-F, 1-4 p.m., for a list of organizations that accept used appliances.
- Bring the appliance to the Montgomery County Solid Waste Transfer Station at the intersection of Shady Grove Rd. and Rt. 355. There is no charge.
- Arrange for a pickup by the appliance dealer from whom you purchased your new appliance.
- Take your appliance to a scrap metal dealer. Make sure they have equipment for removing refrigerants from the unit.

TOWN COUNCIL NOTES

July 12

Mayor Beers asked residents not to permanently leave trash containers at the curbside pickup location. She said several townspeople have stopped taking cans in between pickup days...

Glen Echo Park site manager Frank Cucurullo wanted to remind townspeople that rollerblading is not permitted in the parking lot...

The mayor said that Waste Management has refused to accept large items containing freon on the last Wednesday of the month pickup unless they are certified as having the freon removed and bear a tag confirming this. (Until such time as the town resolves this problem, residents should know that they have the options for recycling such appliances listed in adjoining column.)

The town will be getting a facsimile (fax) machine for use in the town's office.

LANDSCAPING VIOLATION NOTICES SENT

Fewer than 10 violations of the ordinance prohibiting overgrowth of plant materials onto town streets and sidewalks were discovered by the mayor and some council members on a town survey on July 18.

Mayor Beers announced that she was pleased that many previous violators had heeded announcements that they should cut back the overgrowth.

Ten-day deadline notices were sent on July 21 to those still in violation. After the deadline expired at the end of July, Lam's Landscaping was to perform any work needed and keep itemized bills so the town could bill violators.

MANY PETS STILL NEED LICENSES

Fifteen town pets have obtained free rabies inoculations provided by the town for residents at Alpine Veterinary Hospital and MacArthur Animal Hospital and have been licensed.

However, many pets still lack the annual licenses required by Glen Echo town ordinances. Proof of rabies inoculation is necessary in order to obtain a license.

The deadline for obtaining licenses was June 30. Fees have now doubled. The cost for a male or spayed female dog or cat is $8; for an unspayed animal, $16.

Licenses may be obtained by contacting Clerk-Treasurer Kate Horwitz at 320-2171.

VEHICLE CONTROL NOTICES SENT

By David Sproul

A notice of violation of the town vehicle control ordinances for four cars was sent to a Vassar Circle address last month.

Three other violations of the ordinance were noted on Oxford Rd. during a recent tour of town and initial 30-day notices were to be sent to their owners, Councilman Jim Anderson told the council last month.

Asked about the disposition of a boat on Columbia Rd., Councilman Anderson said that no complaints had been received, so he planned to take no action.

STORM DRAIN LINE TO BE REPLACED

The town council approved a bid for $1,385 to replace a storm drain line in the parking lot behind the town hall at a special session on Friday, July 16.

It was necessary to call the special session because of lack of a quorum at the regular July 12 meeting.
